

“Ask and You Shall Receive”

*There's not much for my childhood bible days that I carried on with me
This quote, however, I most definitely live by.*

I have just watched the movie 'Amelia Earhart' starring Richard Gere and Hilary Swank. My strong connection with amazing Amelia, first female to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean, passionate pioneer woman and author, inspires in me a deep appreciation for her life story.

Walking out of the theater, I realize that I have been deeply impacted in reliving the telling of her story. Watching this flick has conjured up a bucket list desire to have a small plane flying experience of my own. Taking full advantage of the energy around this sudden flying enthusiasm, I claim my desire to magnetize an experienced, certified, trustworthy pilot. One who owns their own plane, and would be willing to take me for a sky ride at a reasonable price that I can afford. Playing with the art of manifesting for many years, I've learned the significance of trusting, surrendering, and remaining open when it comes to co-creating with the universe of infinite possibility.

Moving on from the weekend, I am now greeting the beginning of my routine work week. Shortly after arriving at work, a board member and volunteer named Joe engages conversation with me, asking what I did over the weekend. His simple, one line inquiry cracked open my Amelia story.

Upon hearing my inspiration and enthusiasm to meet a small plane owner, Joe's remark was bulls-eye fabulous! Joe was a licensed pilot, owned a small private plane, and was more than happy to take me for a spin. In pure joy and excitement, my initial reaction was 'no way!' And then I remembered the thought seed intentionally planted yesterday, and in gratitude whispered, "Thank you Universe."

The next step was to schedule an up, up, and away date on the calendar. Two weeks past and still no date was scheduled. Doubt tried to whittle away at me, although I remained focused on the spirit of this adventure coming to pass. The third week had arrived when Joe apologetically informed me that he wasn't going to be able to taking me flying because of a family priority situation. To my delight, Joe hooked me up with his pilot buddy Steve who agreed to fill in.

Watching winter forecasts closely, the awaited day of clear skies arrived. A mighty cold day it was, and I was so pumped up with the enthusiasm of a small child awaiting Santa at Christmas that I was most willing to endure chill to the bones.

Before I could take my place in the co-pilot cockpit, Steve invited me to assist in some pre-flight prep, throwing in a mini flight lesson, serving my inquisitive mind and entertaining my steady stream of how's and why's.

Settled into the co-pilot seat, Steve handed me the headphones so that during flight I could connect with him and the communication tower. Feeling so incredibly at ease in that seat, I knew at once that this was not my first time flying in a snug plane... my soul memory knew otherwise. Watching my expression and calm breathing, Steve commented on how relaxed I appeared to be, unlike many visitors he had taken up. I truly was at home during this delightful 1 hr. joy ride, and agree with Steve that flying is far more fun than driving. What is it about flying that I love so much? It must be the dreamy clouds and refreshing, expanded, perspective from higher ground.

I share this Renya Tale because it is one of freedom, transformation, adventure, and fulfillment. Watching the movie 'Amelia,' triggered a burning desire. Acknowledging the depth of inspiration within, I launched a prayerful intent of possibility that carried on the wind to actualization, allowing me to live out my dream.

I am most grateful ...

- for knowing, honoring, and acting on what calls to me from within.
- to the Universe, Joe and Steve for responding to my prayer.
- to sweet little plane for today's beyond awesome thrill!
- to check off another bucket list desire, creating space for more to come!

There is magic in "ask and you shall receive." My life is a testimony of its power. In my thinking and speaking I am conscious that every thought creates. For this reason, I begin each day asking for wonderful surprises, poised ready to see what comes my way.

If you are reading this ~ I invite you to try it ~

Ask for wonderful surprises and align yourself with infinite possibility!
